Here continues part 2 of a 3-part western tale begun last issue, authored by Editor Emeritus Sweetwater Jack!

'Bank Robbery in Jacksonville' Part II.

Binding up Sweetwater's bleeding badger wounds with strips from a petticoat he always carried in his saddlebags, (Don't ask- No, go ahead and ask.... they were from a well-known Saloon (ACS) gal named Rocky Meadows who left town unexpectedly for Texas ... – another story), and knowing the townsfolk were riled up considerable by these owl-hoots robbin' the bank of the only give-away toasters the bank had, Marshal Hyde made a quick decision.

"Sweetwater! Help me load these bodies back on their horses and we'll take 'em back to Jacksonville for a proper trial and hangin'!"

"But, they're DEAD, Marshal! How's that a'gonna' work?"

"Won't make no never-mind! The town'll be celebratin' the return of the loot AND the robbers and if Wimpy unloads that case of "Apple Pie" he was bringin' in on his buckboard and sells 'er before we get back, evverbodys a'gonna' be too drunk to notice little details like that!" "Awright! Does that mean ah'm still yer DEPUTY 'til we get back ta town?"

"Of COURSE it does!.....No! No! Don't put that BADGER back on yer..... Awwww. Dammit!"

“THE BANK ROBBERY IN JACKSONVILLE” PART 2, CONTINUED

Did Wimpy Make it Inta' Town With The Apple Pie? Good question! As Sweetwater probably bled to death on the way back to town from his BADGER wounds, I'll never know...but I strongly suspect that...

... on the way over the hill, wagon creaking and swaying, hugely overloaded with the crates of potent potables, Wimpy, driving his lathered and fatigue-crazed mule, "Truculent" ever onward, was waylaid by a pair of renegade.....NUNS!! Attacking in full habit with a flurry of blows from their wooden rulers, the pair from the nearly disbanded Convent of the Sisters of Perpetual Petulance, fell upon the unwary "Purveyor of Pie" with gusto, claiming the liquor, the wagon, the mule, and yes, Wimpy himself, to be "spoils of war". (What "war" was not immediately clear but apparently did not matter.) Declaring the wagon and load (and Wimpy, I guess) to be prisoners of war, the leader, known only as "Reverend Mother" and her devoted sidekick, "Sister Mary Blast-femur" lay claim to their booty by jamming a pike with the convent's flag (a pair of black bloomers on a field of virgin white) on it into the mass of the load. This apparently caused one of the casks to spring a leak!

Wimpy, regaining consciousness from the blows to his head, was the first to notice the impending loss of "cargo" and sprang to his feet. Hurriedly flopping under the wagon and placing his face directly under the leak, he opened his mouth to the flowing nectar, in an attempt to avoid the total loss of the precious fluid. The two nuns (who had an amazing familial resemblance) looked at each other and said: "What the hell; waste not, want not!" and scooped under the wagon to assist Wimpy in his recovery efforts.....

As dusk approached the tense town of Jacksonville, so did Marshal Hyde....leading three horses with the (former) bank robbers slung athwartship (that's "sailor talk" for cross-wise) on them and one rider-less livery mount following behind. As the townsfolk approached the dusty and saddle-sore Marshal he saw that they were all SOBER! ("Rats!" thought Marshal Hyde, "They're a'gonna notice that them owl-hoots're already dead!" "That may create a problem with the trial and hangin', unless I kin create some sorta DIVERSION.")

Thinking fast, (a fairly new experience for the Marshal) He called out: "Is Wimpy here with that shipment of "Apple Pie" fer the Saloon (ACS) yet? His brother Whiney Henry said he'd done left Bonanza yesterday!!"

An immediate hubbub broke out amongst the townsfolk (Don't ask, I don't know what a "hubbub" is, either). Esther Gen Overload, the local "Madam" called out: "And where's Sweetwater? That's the horse he rode OUT on....!" (Her concern, generated by the fact that Sweetwater was one of her best and most frequent CUSTOMERS, was supported by several other brothel and Saloon (ACS) owners in the crowd..)

Turning in his saddle with a creak of leather, Marshal Hyde sees that, indeed, Sweetwater Jack is among the missing... "Dang! He musta' fell off again... "We'd better set up a search party in the morning and go lookin' fer him. You all get ahold of Checotah and see if he's got that aerostat of his patched back up yet and outta that tree he landed in last week and kin git what he calls "airborne" to scout out the back trail bright 'n early.... Meantime, I'll git these bank robbers into the jail and ready for their trial and hangin tomorrow."

("So far so good.. they ain't noticed that "the deceased" IS deceased. I wonder where Sweetwater fell off his horse that last time...")

Bright and early the next morning (Ok, about eleven), Checotah finally rounded up enough hot air to get his balloon and basket into the air. A Lieutenant Colonel in the recently-formed Civil Aerostat Patrol, Checotah had enlisted several of the townsfolk as "scanners" and "observers" to assist in aerial search. Unfortunately, he had not found a way to create enough hot air to lift them and continued to fly solo... He'd heard that some Germans had been having good luck with something called "Hydrogen" in their balloons and he hoped to acquire some for his aerostat, named the "Hindenburg"...

STAY TUNED NEXT ISSUE FOR PART III, THE (HOPEFULLY) EXCITING CONCLUSION!

Dispatches From Territorial Governor

... Guest Contributor – former T.G. Sweetwater Jack

Question re Shotgun belts:

Is it legal to sew rifle/pistol loops onto the outside of shotgun loops on a shotgun belt?

Answer: NO. It is illegal in SASS. It would be perfectly legal to put a slide containing say, 10 rounds on a shotgun belt. This slide could then be positioned anywhere on the belt except over the shotgun loops.

So, does this mean that a belt to hold shotgun rounds cannot also hold cartridges for rifle/pistol? No. The ruling refers to the loops not the belt. Having rifle rounds on the belt is ok, but attaching the rifle loops to the outside of a shotgun loop is not ok.

ROC RULING RE SEWING RIFLE/PISTOL AMMO LOOPS ON SHOTGUN LOOPS:

- NOT "TRADITIONAL DESIGN"
- NOT ON THE LIST OF APPROVED "METHODS OF CARRY" (SHB p.11)
= NOT LEGAL.

*Applicable rule = P+misses for "Use of illegally acquired ammo"
This will be codified in the next edit of the SHB.*

Bear Bone Smith, SASS Reg. 10719, Merlin Marauder T.G... will return next month.

And we all continue to wish Bear Bone a swift, pain-free, and complete recovery!

Take care, pard!
